INCREDIBLE WOMEN

THREE inspirational women – Barbara Layne, Salmah Kansara and Ngozi Headley-Fulani – were celebrated at this year's Mayor's Civic Awards.

Now in its third year, the awards, which took place at Hackney Town Hall on 23 May, recognise and celebrate some of the incredible people who live in the borough.

Retired community nurse Barbara Layne has been a volunteer for 20 years, visiting vulnerable and isolated older residents in Hackney. Involved in many community initiatives, including volunteering for the monthly over 50s dance social, she also helped start a project to encourage older people to use local leisure centres.

Barbara regularly helps at St Paul's Winter Night Shelter, providing food and shelter for homeless people, and has encouraged 20 other older people to volunteer for the shelter.

Barbara said: "I hope more people can get involved with volunteering, as there are many people in Hackney that need support – anything from a telephone call to a knock on the door can help someone."

Salmah Kansara is the Services Development Manager at the Ihsan Children's Centre based at the North London Muslim Community Centre, N16. Through her role there she has touched many lives; helping women who are experiencing domestic abuse, or who are homeless and vulnerable to find support and access services.

Salmah also works with women who are struggling to speak English, helping them develop their skills. Described as a 'hero', Salmah motivates mothers who have lost their confidence to get back into work and study.

After receiving her award, Salmah said: "I enjoy my work. I get to meet people from all backgrounds and help them to break down barriers so they can believe in themselves and do well. So many people in Hackney are doing wonderful work, which people don't even know about, so it's great that we can celebrate and shine a light on those services at these awards."

Ngozi Headley-Fulani set up Sistah Space in 2015 to support women and girls of African heritage who have experienced domestic or sexual abuse, and those who have lost a loved one to domestic violence. Over the past three years Ngozi has fundraised to provide toys and trips for affected children and families, and a community car to help women in emergencies.

Ngozi said: "We believe the only way a community can thrive is if we understand and make time for each other. Through volunteering and supporting your community you can give voice to the voiceless, bring people together to find out about each other's cultures and help Hackney grow as a community."

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, who gave out the awards on the night, left the evening feeling inspired. He said: "It's really important to celebrate the borough's community champions, who go above and beyond to make Hackney the great place that it is today."

"These awards not only help us recognise the achievements of these extraordinary residents but will hopefully inspire more people to get involved with volunteering and community action to help make a difference to Hackney."

A FLAGSHIP Council housing development and the transformation of the 1930s Grade II listed Hackney Town Hall have been recognised as some of the capital's best new architecture at this year's Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA) London Awards.

The Kings Crescent estate, N4, designed by Henley Halebrown and Karakusevic Carson Architects, was one of just two Council housing developments recognised in the awards, which honours the best architecture of all types across London.

The project, which has seen 275 new Council homes and major improvements to the existing homes with new 'winter garden' balconies, was acknowledged for its close engagement with residents during the planning and its innovative approach to regeneration by combining new homes with refurbished buildings.

The refurbishment of the Art Deco Hackney Town Hall on Mare Street, led by Hawkins Brown architects, also received an award. The conservation project retained the original features of the building, while creating new spaces for events, weddings and ceremonies – including two covered courtyards – to ensure it remains a public building.

Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, said: "These awards demonstrate our commitment to both maintaining Hackney's history and heritage, but also creating well-designed high quality new buildings that meet the needs of the borough today."

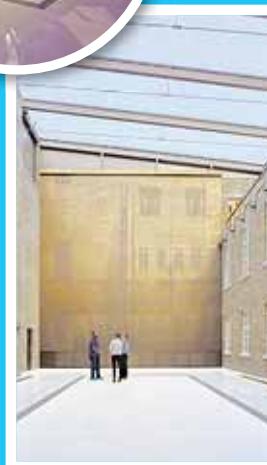

"As with all the new homes we build, at Kings Crescent we've worked with high-calibre architects and the local community to create designs that don't just provide much needed new Council homes but create places where people really want to live. This award shows that building genuinely affordable homes doesn't have to mean compromising on design.

"The recognition for the newly refurbished town hall is testament to our efforts to both invest in and preserve an important historic public building and to ensure that future generations of Hackney residents can have pride in this modern, accessible hub of civic life."

These projects will now go forward for the RIBA National Awards to be announced in July. Those collecting national awards will then be considered for the RIBA Stirling Prize.

Prince William visited Hackney mental health charity Core Arts, sitting in on some of its classes

PRINCE William has visited a Hackney charity dedicated to improving the lives of those with mental health problems. The Duke of Cambridge spent time at Core Arts on 10 May, where he met its director Paul Monks, deputy director Giuliana

Molinari, and trustees. Paul said: "It was a great honour to be visited by the Duke. He was incredibly well-informed and passionate about mental health and it was apparent just how much he cares." Set up 26 years ago, the charity delivers classes to over 1,000 members. Its five subject areas – designed to improve wellbeing and aid community integration – are art, music, multimedia, sports and horticulture. The Duke watched classes in logic, singing, portraiture, ceramics, botanical drawing and songwriting, and chatted to members about their work. He also met members of Core Sports which was recently awarded London Sport Club of the Year 2018. For more info, visit: www.corearts.co.uk

Hackney Matters: Have your say on important local issues

RESIDENTS can earn points and prizes for sharing their opinions on important local issues through the online residents panel, Hackney Matters.

Members can expect regular, short online surveys, occasional invites to group discussions, and the opportunity to interact virtually with other members and to attend the annual Hackney Matters event.

Anyone who lives or works in the borough can join Hackney Matters, where they will be rewarded for continued commitment. For example, members who complete a survey will automatically be entered into a free draw with the chance to win prizes and vouchers, as well as earn redeemable points.

Hundreds of residents from a range of backgrounds have already signed up, and the Council is keen to recruit new members to help refresh the panel, to ensure it is representative of Hackney's diverse population.

Panel member Sharon Shamedje, 47, said: "I really enjoy being a part of the panel, I feel like I am able to get involved and really make a change in my community. I have seen the difference being on the panel can make, especially in housing and youth services."

The Council will use the feedback from the panel to help deliver better services that meet the needs of people living in the borough. For more info on Hackney Matters, or to sign up, visit: hacknematters.org.uk/join\_now

Speaker's corner

THE Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Soraya Adejare, hung up her ceremonial chain this month as her year-long role as Speaker came to an end.

The role of Speaker fulfills public duties on behalf of the Council, as well as raising funds for their chosen charities.

In her capacity as Speaker, Cllr Adejare has attended over 290 events, introduced 1,203 new citizens to the borough and raised over £9,000 for her chosen charities – Off Centre, Skyway and Access to Sports.

She has also made history, helping to raise the rainbow flag above Hackney Town Hall for the first time.

Aiding Cllr Adejare with her duties throughout the year was her brother and Speakers'

Consort for the year, Olu Adesanu. Alongside Olu, in the role of unofficial Speaker's Consort, was Cllr Adejare's daughter, Nafeesah, now four, who accompanied her mother to almost all of the events.

Cllr Adejare said: "The last year has been fantastic,

I have enjoyed every second of it. Being Speaker gives you great insight into Hackney in its entirety, meeting people from all walks of life and seeing all the amazing things going on across the whole borough."

In terms of the year's highlights, Cllr Adejare said: "Presiding over citizenship ceremonies was truly rewarding. I loved every single ceremony and all the people I met. It's heartwarming to see people come from all over the world and choose Hackney as their home."

She added: "Being able to go out there and represent all the amazing things our borough has to offer and promote what our citizens are doing has been an honour and a privilege."

Traders wanted for newly revamped Kingsland Market

TRADERS are being sought by the Council to sell second hand bargains, vintage goods and antiques on the same site as the historic Kingsland Waste Market on Hackney's Kingsland Road.

Traditionally, the market, between Haggerston and Dalston, was the place to go for spare parts and for second hand goods.

However, Kingsland Waste suffered a decline and in 2015 the decision was made to cease the renewal of temporary trading licences for the market. Currently there is only one permanent trader on the market.

Now the Council, working with local businesses and traders, is bringing in a new second hand market to build on the legacy of Kingsland Waste.

The new Kingsland Market will launch in July, and will keep its traditional roots – specialising in second hand bargains, antiques and vintage goods.

Anyone interested in trading at the market can find out more at: hackney.gov.uk/kingsland-market; or by calling: 020 8356 8288.

Join special needs discussion

THE newly appointed Cabinet Member with responsibility for special educational needs and disabilities (SEND), Cllr Christopher Kennedy, is inviting parents, carers, teachers and local groups to discuss funding for special educational needs.

He will host an event aimed at finding out about residents' experiences of SEND provision and their ideas for what services might look like in the future, in the face of ongoing Government funding freezes for these vital services.

Cllr Kennedy said: "The Government has effectively frozen funding for Education Health and Care Plans – which support our most vulnerable children – since 2011, despite an increase of 35 per cent in the number of young people we support.

"In Hackney we have chosen to fill that gap through making cuts to other services, but we cannot continue to do that. We're plugging the gap for high needs, or 'top-up', support by over £6million a year, yet face ongoing reductions to our Government grant across the Council of £35million over the next two years."

Those taking part in the event will be asked to discuss key issues in small groups. Their feedback will help to shape Council policies around SEND and will also inform the outcomes of a new SEND working group. The group will be led by an independent chair, with representatives from parents' groups, campaign groups, councillors, teachers and other professionals.

The event will be held at a central Hackney location on 26 June, from 6.30-8.30pm. To take part in this event, find out more, or register your interest to attend, visit: consultation.hackney.gov.uk/hackney-learning-trust/codesign

MAGINE this: you are cooking for 50 guests, yet have no professional training. Feeling daunted? Now imagine you're also coming to terms with a brain injury that has wiped out huge swathes of your memory, challenging your understanding of who you are, and your place in the world.

"It's amazing to do something out of your comfort zone," says David Mercer. The 51-year-old with a permanent smile on his face is one of the cooks at Headway Eats, a Hackney supper club with a reputation for putting such top-notch food on the table that it routinely sells out.

Supper clubs may be de rigueur these days, but something sets this one apart. It is run by Headway East London, a charity devoted to helping those with brain injuries, as well as their families. Tonight's menu, and the cooking itself, is led by these survivors, meaning that the experience is not only delicious but, for some, deeply therapeutic.

"To have people pay money to eat food that you have been a part of making, makes me feel..." David pauses, to find the right words. "When someone puts on a new tailored suit," he continues. "It's the same feeling. It's a proud feeling."

David was a cabbie before an accident left him with brain injuries so extensive that he lost all memory of The Knowledge.

While deeply traumatic, his experience is not unusual. An estimated 350,000 people are admitted to UK hospitals each year with brain injuries caused by anything from traffic accidents and assaults to tumours and strokes.

Modern medicine saves their lives. But many are then left alone to tackle the next part of the job. And for most, this task is far scarier: rebuilding their identities and roles in the world.

Since the 1980s, Headway UK has helped people through its programme of therapies and by providing a stable, caring community. And also, through food.

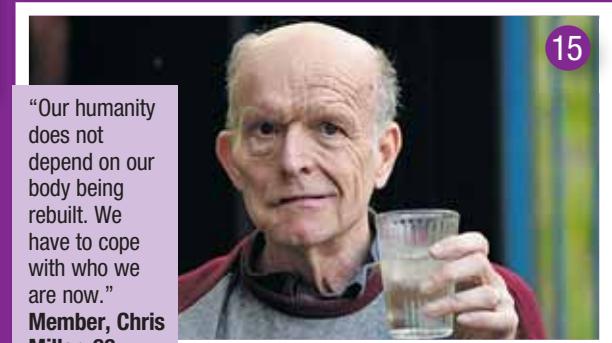

"Food is an integral part of the Headway East London day and forms one of its key occupational projects," says Laura Owens, the charity's communications and development manager.

"A different group of members will cook lunch for the rest of the centre every day," she explains, "and for many of them it might be the first time that they have gone back into the kitchen after their injury."

For a large proportion, Laura explains, food memories have a unique potency. "They recall a time before their brain injury," she says, "and the act of cooking certain meals again for many can be a huge challenge and an incredible achievement. It's about re-learning skills or gaining new ones and defining a new role for themselves."

Headway East London is a charity supporting people affected by brain injury

DID YOU KNOW?

As food became a bigger part of everyone's lives at the centre, the team had a sudden revelation: "We've got to a point where the food is good enough to share more widely," says Laura, "and the achievements of our members could be celebrated more widely through food too."

And thus, the supper club was born. Tonight, as David chops and drizzles in the kitchen with other brain injury survivors, 50 guests are gathering in the garden of Headway's community space, overlooking the Regent's Canal. Passers-by pause in their commute along the canal path to gaze covertly at the group who sit in the evening sun, sipping on sandalwood and cardamom infusions topped with basil seeds.

The three-course menu they will soon sit down to has been developed through a number of sessions. In these, members explore their memories and stories about food to create recipe ideas for the evening and refine their culinary skills.

Today's menu focuses on one particular member, Freddy, and his Punjabi heritage. And so, guests, staff, volunteers and members sit down at shared tables to eat samosas, pomegranate seeds and fresh vegetables with turmeric sauce.

“Headway Eats supper club is about more than food, it's about sharing, socialising and fostering a community”

Guests chatter among themselves, making new acquaintances as the boundaries between cooks and guests, outsiders and brain injury survivors, blur into insignificance.

These supper clubs are often accompanied by storytelling, poetry readings and mini exhibitions from Headway members. Today, there is live music and readings, then lamb curry, lime and chilli dip and finally Rasgulla – cottage cheese cooked in sugar syrup and topped with pistachio nuts.

Laura says: "It's about more than food, it's about

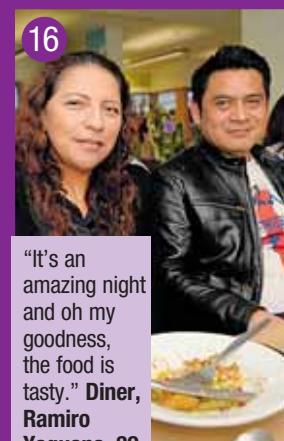

"Our humanity does not depend on our body being rebuilt. We have to cope with who we are now."

sharing, socialising and fostering a community."

The next supper club is set to take place on 19 July. It costs £20 for three courses and a non-alcoholic drink.

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

By Harriet Worsley

JANA Dowling was working in TV when it happened. "I started to feel really awful," she explains. "My girlfriend said, 'this isn't normal' and sent me to the doctors, but the medication made me yawn every minute or so, and I couldn't focus. In that culture, you can't be seen to be weak. So I stopped taking them. And six weeks later, I had what's called a severe depressive episode."

For five weeks Jana was placed under 24-hour watch. She recalls: "I was in bed all that time. I had agoraphobia, anorexia, I was diagnosed as bipolar..."

"Then I started to take my medication, to exercise, to track my sleep, my nutrition, my mood... I took recovery on as a job."

Jana was, she claims, lucky: "Back in those darkest days, I had a friend who stayed with me for five weeks, watching me for 24 hours. I was so, so lucky.

"The only reason I'm here today is the extraordinary kindness of others. I wanted to pass that on, to be that person for others."

And so last year Jana set up The 888 Collective, a social enterprise based in Dalston, supporting and creating work opportunities for people with mental health issues.

Jana says: "When I was finally healthy enough to look for a job I was hit with a new crisis. Who would have me? What should I tell them about the last four months?"

In her old life, Jana was a successful, high-powered

A break with 888

Jana Dowling, founder of The 888 Collective, a social enterprise that supports and creates work opportunities for people with mental health issues career, setting up London Fashion Week's daily newspaper and then as a producer in live TV. She had even dabbled in stand-up comedy.

But after her depressive episode, Jana says: "Leaving the house or answering the phone could be a struggle. I needed to take that step into working life in order to keep getting better. But I knew I couldn't handle a big office environment."

Once again, a friend came to the rescue. "She's called Kirsty Hulse and she owns a digital agency called Manyminds," says Jana. "She created a PA position for me and for a while she put up with me doing a truly terrible job. But she was so gentle and forgiving."

Before long, Jana was producing and directing online videos for Kirsty's clients. Which goes to show, says Jana: "The act of working was an essential part of my recovery.

"You build a routine for yourself at home, but managing your symptoms in a work environment is a new challenge. It takes time and support. But we can do it."

Over 300,000 people with long-term mental health issues lose their jobs each year. It is reported to cost the UK economy up to £8 billion a year. And yet the symptoms of those with mental health problems are not, Jana points out, suggestive of their ability.

She says: "Symptoms are manageable. And once they are effectively managed, you see people's real capabilities."

To that end, The 888 Collective has created self-development courses, designed to provide people with the tools they need to manage their mental wellbeing, with a view to moving back into the workplace.

Jana is now providing evening and weekend courses to those who are in work and looking to learn how to better manage their mental health in the workplace.

She has a lot of personal experience on which to draw, and the will to change the status quo.

The 888 Collective is also developing an app, into which users will be able to enter and track their symptoms, circulate their own tips and receive tips from other people. A second tier takes users through the 888 courses. And a third will connect "the right people to the right jobs," says Jana.

Finally, there are 88 L8s, pop-up restaurants and events where young chefs put together the menus and all other staff are people who have been through the 888 courses.

"We had our first one at Dusty Knuckle in Hackney," says Jana. "It was amazing, it sold out completely. There came a moment when I was able to sit back and watching our extraordinary members at work.

"Some staff started with us with severe anxiety and didn't have enough confidence to ask questions or look you in the eye, and there they were taking charge, changing their narrative, waiting on tables and doing an awesome job."

It was, she says, "one of the most incredible experiences of my life."

THE borough is set to get more safer junctions, protected cycle tracks on main roads and quieter side streets, according to plans announced at this year's Hackney Cycling Conference.

The conference, now in its seventh year, has become a fixture in the calendar for cycling enthusiasts, professionals, campaigners and elected members. This year, over 200 people attended.

Opening the conference, which took place on 17 May, Mayor of Hackney, Philip Glanville, outlined a number of schemes in the pipeline, including a plan to transform Hackney Central by removing through traffic from Amhurst Road and improving walking and cycling routes.

The area-wide reduction in motor traffic dominance will contribute greatly to ongoing regeneration of the town centre.

The Mayor also touched on the construction of safe cycling tracks on Wick Road being built, early designs for Seven Sisters Road and a scheme for Green Lanes, which would see cycle tracks on both sides of the road.

Andreas Røhl, from Gehl Architects and former director of the Bicycle Programme in Copenhagen, gave a talk titled 'It's not all about the bike'. It was a theme Mayor Glanville also touched on.

He said: "Planning for

“More needs to be done to encourage and enable communities to take up cycling”

cycling and walking is about planning for fewer cars, and good public transport options are needed so that car-free living is viable."

Another emerging theme was the idea of a long term decline in the role of the residential street from a space for people to congregate and children to play, to a place for people to park cars or drive through.

As well as a programme of closing side roads to through traffic, the Council is developing an approach to community-led parklets, which will allow residents to reclaim parking spaces for community uses.

MP for Hackney North and Stoke Newington, Diane Abbott, said: "Hackney has the highest proportion of people cycling to work, and that doesn't happen by accident.

"Every morning, when I leave my house in Dalston, I see dozens of people cycling to work and also some people taking their kids to school on the back of their bikes. More needs to be done to encourage and enable the diverse communities in Hackney to take up cycling."

This sentiment was summed up by Andreas, who said: "If you get up in the morning and the car or public transport seems like the safest, quickest, easiest way to get to work and cycling seems like an extreme sport, you won't cycle."

Gardens host open weekend

HACKNEY'S green spaces will be joining other gardens across London as part of this year's Open Garden Squares Weekend, which takes place from 9-10 June.

The annual event allows members of the public exclusive access to some of the capital's most exciting, private and unique gardens. Organised by the London Parks and Gardens Trust, and now in its 21st year, the event highlights the significant social, cultural, environmental and economic contribution that gardens, squares and green spaces make to the capital and its inhabitants. This year's list comprises: Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, E8; Fassett Square, E8; Gloucester Square Residents' Gardens, E2; St Joseph's Hospice Garden, E8; St Mary's Secret Garden, E2; King Henry's Walk Garden, N1; and The Growing Kitchen, N1.

A weekend ticket allows visitors the opportunity to explore over 200 of London's most fascinating squares, gardens and green spaces including private gardens.

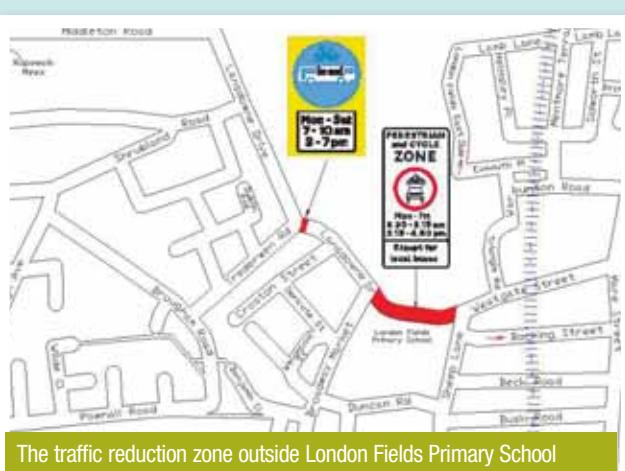

Many participating gardens are not normally open to the public, and will be hosting special events and activities for adults and children. Advance purchase tickets cost £15.

The traffic reduction zone outside London Fields Primary School

Making streets around London Fields safe and quiet

ROADS outside another primary school in Hackney are set to become quieter and safer thanks to a new School Street and other traffic reduction measures.

From 6 June, Westgate Street outside London Fields Primary School will become a pedestrian, cycle and local buses only zone between 8.30-9.15am and 3-7pm, from Monday to 3.15-4pm, from Monday to Friday in school term-time.

A bus gate will be installed at the junction of Lansdowne Drive and Trederwen Road, which will only allow buses, pedestrians and cyclists through to continue eastbound on Lansdowne Drive between 7-10am and 3-7pm, from Monday to Saturday. There will be no left turn into Richmond Road from Mare Street between 7-10am and 3-7pm Monday to Saturday.

The scheme is enforced by camera. Residents who drive into the School Street zone, through the bus gate or turn left on to Richmond Road from Mare Street during the operating hours can be fined £65 (rising to £130 if not paid early).

This will be Hackney's fifth School Street, which aims to create a safer environment while maintaining access for residents, businesses, pedestrians and cyclists.

girl.boy.child

6 June, Sutton House, 2 & 4 Homerton High St, E9 6JQ

AS a teenager, a trip to a National Trust property was a tedious proposition, but these days the charity is hosting radical events and exhibitions that may have the blue rinse brigade crying into their cream teas. One such alternative happening is girl.boy.child at Sutton House. Developed by renowned singer songwriter David McAlmont, it explores LGBTQI+ histories and their contemporary significance. McAlmont and Professor Richard Sandell, from the University of Leicester, spent a year visiting trust properties and researching the lesser-known stories of same sex love, desire and gender diversity which these historic homes hold.

McAlmont's performance brings to life some extraordinary tales of people who challenged convention, as well as the places they created and inhabited.

Learn about William John Bankes, who fled into exile in 1841 after being caught with a soldier in 'an indecent act'; feminist playwright and suffragette, Christopher St John; and Henry Paget, of Plas Newydd in North Wales, known as 'the Dancing Marquess'.

Stoke Newington Literary Festival

1-3 June, various Stoke Newington locations

STOKE Newington Literary Festival has never been short of bookish celebrities. This year's line-up, however, is astonishingly star-studded, with none other than Chelsea Clinton opening the festival on 1 June, with a talk about her new children's book. She's followed by a Gala Night that features the novelist Ali Smith and squeezes gentrification, Brexit and immigration in a single evening. Saturday's programme packs in Adam Kay, bestselling author of 'This is Going to Hurt: The Secret Diaries of a Junior Doctor' and a joint event with literary fiction sensations Meg Wolitzer and Olivia Laing. Then there's Thurston Moore interviewing music industry grandee and DJ Dave Haslam about his book 'Sonic Youth Slept on My Floor'.

Sunday continues apace with podcast sensation 'Remainiacs', while Trump and Putin are dissected by Michael Goldfarb and Luke Harding. Kids will be kept agog by Andy Stanton, author of Mr Gum and winner of the Roald Dahl 'Funny Prize', and a Bear Hunt around Stoke Newington Common. Cooks are catered for by food writers Diana Henry, Claudia Roden and Rachel Roddy, while night owls will hoot over the Game of Thrones pub quiz, late night poetry at the Mascara Bar and the ghostly late night event in the ruined Mortuary Chapel in Abney Park cemetery. Tickets range from £4 - £10 with a number of free events. For more info, visit: www.stokenewingtonliteraryfestival.com

WITH funding for the arts having been cut over recent years, some of Hackney's most talented young musicians have come together to create their own professional music studio.

Based in Stoke Newington, Root 73 is a not-for-profit studio that provides a hub for aspiring young artists who want to work with professional music equipment but might not be able to afford the high costs of renting a studio in London.

The two founders, Asher and Maya, both from Hackney, were music producers who realised that they could combine their expertise to create a space for people to collaborate and have full creative freedom.

It has ambitions to become the 'Roundhouse' of Hackney – a nod to the famous Chalk Farm concert venue, which also provides a studio and space for young people.

Asher said: "People are craving community, and this is a space for people to come together in a creative, team spirited environment."

As well as professional audio work, Root 73 also offers services such as high-quality video production, provided mainly by Sonny Jake, one of Root 73's central figures, and showcasing of art work at

Creative root

Root 73 studio provides a hub, a platform and a community for young artists in the borough

Hackney is full of young creative people and Root 73 is a place where young artists can focus their talent

the events it runs.

Young artists who join the community do not have to pay to use their facilities.

As Atma, a director who works with Root 73, said: "Once you are involved, you get sucked in by the welcoming atmosphere."

In the two years since it opened, the studio has worked with over 100 artists aged 17-30.

Jake Whiteman, an artist who works with the studio, said: "The passion for music builds connections between all the artists at Root 73. It's not about money, it's about making good music and enjoying yourself."

"Hackney is full of young creative people and Root 73 is a place where young artists can work to focus their talent."

The studio holds regular showcase events of the projects it has worked on, with the money going back into funding the studio.

The studio is currently running a crowdfunding campaign to raise funds for new music equipment and continue its development.

Free filmmaking workshop with Hackney Shed

THEATRE company Hackney Shed is set to run a free filmmaking workshop at the Huddleston Centre, E8, on 30 and 31 May.

The workshop is open to young people aged 16 to 25 years old, with a focus on those with additional needs. It forms part of a new branch of Hackney Shed, called the Hackney Shed Collective.

Participants will spend the first day working with Hackney Shed staff to create material for the film. This will include setting up scenes and helping to make costumes or props.

The young people will create the film on the second day, with the help of a professional filmmaker.

Vicki Hambley, Artistic

Director of Hackney Shed, said: "We are setting up Hackney Shed Collective to try to offer more to young adults with learning difficulties and access needs."

"We've set the age range from 16 to 25 years because these are such transitional years and young people say it's important to them to have activities with others in their age group."

News in brief

Youth media charity funding to chart history of communication

A HACKNEY youth project has won nearly £50,000 to make a film charting the history of communication.

The Heritage Lottery Fund granted Mouth That Roars £46,700 earlier this month. The money is set to be spent on a film project that starts with the first cabled messages ever sent across the British Empire, through the development of a world class postal service, to the futuristic possibilities of wearable tech and digital implants.

Denise Rose, Mouth That Roars Director, said: "We are so pleased that the hard work young people have put into their grant application has paid off. They really want to get going and are excited about developing a project with elders in their community."

The young people involved in this new project will work with the Postal Museum, delve into the BFI Archives, receive training in interview techniques, take part in a summer residential course and receive an accredited filmmaking course. The project will culminate in a series of screenings and local community workshops. For more info, visit: mouththatroars.com

Free anti-bullying workshop

THE Anna Fiorentini Theatre & Film School is set to hold a free two-day workshop that will explore the effects of bullying through performing arts.

Called Stop the Hate, young people aged between nine and 12 years old will have the opportunity to put together their own anti-bullying performance. They will use acting, song and dance to raise awareness of bullying, and how it can be combatted.

The workshop is set to cover various types of bullying, including physical, verbal, racial, gender-based and cyberbullying. Participants will then showcase their performance to friends and family.

To apply for the free workshop, which will take place at Chats Palace Arts Centre, E9, on 29 and 30 May, visit: www.annafiorentini.com/anti-bullying; e-mail: hello@annafiorentini.com; or call: 020 7682 1403.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2018.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2018. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall. To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 2212. Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.

Step back in time

Participants in the tea dance at Shoreditch Town Hall, which launched Hackney's Dementia Arts Festival

Photos: Sean Pollock

A GLORIOUS tea dance in the Grade II listed building of Shoreditch Town Hall kick-started the first Dementia Arts Festival in Hackney.

Former Speaker, Cllr Soraya Adejare, and Dementia Champion, Cllr Yvonne Maxwell, joined residents and tea dance aficionados from across London on 21 May to relive their memories in the grand Assembly Hall.

Dancing increases the wellbeing of people with dementia through relaxation and improves balance and coordination, even as the disease progresses.

Former World Latin American Dance Champion Raymond Root led a beginners' dance class for novices to learn the basic steps of the foxtrot, quickstep, swing and waltz, before more experienced dancers took to the floor.

Stewart Donalds, 57, from Lower Clapton, said: "I think this event is wonderful. I don't know much about dementia but hopefully after this event I will know more."

“ This event provides support, knowledge and awareness so that dementia is not a foreign word for people ”

The tea dance was one of a number of events which took place from 21-25 May for people with dementia, their families and friends to mark Dementia Action Week.

Resident Pam Boodhna, 63, said: "I think this event is fantastic. It provides support, knowledge and awareness about dementia, so that dementia is not a foreign word for people and they know how to support a family member if they are affected by the condition.

"It is also lovely to see young people dancing with older residents."

News in brief

Register deaths at Homerton

RESIDENTS are now able to register a death at Homerton University Hospital. Previously the bereaved were required to travel to the Hackney Service Centre to register deaths, however this new service means that they can undergo this process at the hospital.

The service, which launched on 23 May, currently offers a death registration service on Wednesdays, by appointment only, on the ground floor of the hospital.

Hackney Registration Service hopes to expand the number of days the service is offered, as well as expanding to register births in the near future.

To book an appointment, contact the Hackney Service Centre, on: 020 8356 3355; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/registrations

Helping people with cancer

A SERVICE for people living with cancer, which has helped 700 people in the past year, is calling on residents to get in touch.

The Macmillan Social Prescribing (MSP) Service supports people living with cancer in Hackney, Waltham Forest, Tower Hamlets and Newham. It points them towards community services that will help them get back on track following treatment, such as employment advice, welfare advice or psychological workshops and support groups. Hackney resident Pamella, pictured, has attended sessions with the MSP team at Hackney Central Library.

She said: "Since the sessions, I'm not as worried as before. I'm more relaxed and it's changed the way I think. It helps you to gain back your confidence and your ability to do what you need to do."

To find out more, call: 0208 709 9736; or e-mail: socialprescribing.cancer@nhs.net

Highlighting diabetic foot care

PEOPLE living with diabetes and their carers are invited to an event which raises awareness of the importance of foot care among diabetics.

Attendees to Putting Feet First, on 14 June, will be able to meet other people with diabetes and hear about services and support from the NHS and other health organisations. Foot care amongst diabetics is incredibly important as foot related complications are common for people living with the condition.

Putting Feet First, organised by Diabetes UK, City & Hackney CCG and Homerton University Hospital, will take place from 6-8.30pm (refreshments and registration from 5.30pm) at Hackney Picturehouse, E8 1HE. The event is free. Register online at: eu.eventscloud.com/pfch; or call the Diabetes UK London team on: 020 7424 1116.

Capturing Hackney

Hackney Museum hosts exhibition of photographs taken at Gibson's studio between 1952 and 1978

PHOTOGRAPHS taken by renowned local snapper Ron Gibson have gone on display at Hackney Museum, giving a unique insight into life in the borough in the 1950s, 60s and 70s.

The photos are part of a huge collection of film negatives, which for decades sat undisturbed in the basement of the studio in Lower Clapton Road.

In 2014, 40 boxes of

“The collection is a hugely significant record of life in Hackney in the middle of the 20th century” negatives were donated to Hackney Archives in Dalston and found to hold thousands of envelopes containing almost all of the work done by the studio over a 26-year period.

Staff at the archives began to view the negatives and soon realised the collection is a hugely significant record of life in Hackney in the middle of the 20th century.

The well-known studio was owned by self-taught photographer Ron Gibson from 1952 until 1989. Wedding photography was the mainstay of his business but the collection also includes many images of local pubs and cafes, schools, dances, workplace parties as well as birthdays, christenings and bar mitzvahs, particularly in the 1950s and 1960s.

The collection starts in 1952 and images depict Hackney as a mainly white working class area still recovering from the Second World War with bomb damage visible in several images. The collection goes on to chart Hackney's transformation over the following decades into the hugely diverse area we know today.

It is estimated to contain around 150,000 negatives, 75 per cent of which are black and white. While almost all of the black and white negatives have dates, surnames and addresses attached, only a handful of the colour images, which date from 1972 to 1978, have any information.

Staff at Hackney Archives are keen to speak to people who appear in the photographs in order to record and preserve their stories as part of the history of Hackney. So far, people in locations as diverse as Jamaica, the US and Pakistan have shared their stories.

In 2016 Hackney Archives was awarded funding by the Esmée Fairbairn Collections Fund to digitise the negatives so that they can be shared with the wider community. A team of over 30 volunteers is carrying out vital work to preserve the negatives prior to digitisation.

Hackney Archives is also working with local communities to catalogue the images. Once developed, the new catalogue will allow people to search and view the Gibson collection online.

In the meantime, images from the collection can be viewed at: flickr.com/photos/hackney\_archives/

MORE INFO

 Hackney Archives will be featuring photographs from the Gibson collection in each edition of Hackney Today. If you recognise anyone in the photos, call: 020 8356 8925; or e-mail: archives@hackney.gov.uk

Are you Sugar Smart? Join in the Ditch the Fizz survey

THE Council wants to understand the sugary drinks consumption habits of those who have pledged to give up unhealthy fizzy drinks for a fortnight as part of Hackney's 'Ditch the Fizz' campaign.

The information collected in this survey will be used to inform the work of Sugar Smart Hackney, a joint initiative of Hackney Public Health and Hackney Food Partnership funded by the Council and Sustainable Food Cities.

It will allow Sugar Smart Hackney to help residents make more informed decisions on what they choose to drink and how healthier low or no sugar drinks, including tap water, can be better promoted.

Residents who want to join the Ditch the Fizz campaign can complete this survey and their names will be entered in a prize draw.

London Borough of Hackney. Designation of an area for Additional Licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation (HMOs), Section 56, Housing Act 2004

The London Borough of Hackney ("The Council") in exercise of its powers under section 56 of the Housing Act 2004 ("the Act") has on the 10th of May 2018 designated the entire area of its district, as subject to Additional Licensing. The designation applies to all Houses in Multiple Occupation ("HMOs") that are occupied under a tenancy or a licence unless it is an HMO that is subject to mandatory licensing under section 55(2)(a) of the Act or is subject to any statutory exemption and with the exception that, in respect of a converted block of flats to which Section 257 of the Housing Act 2004 applies, the Additional Licensing scheme will only apply where all the units of accommodation in the block are privately rented.

This scheme will be known as The London Borough of Hackney Designation of an Area for Additional Licensing of Houses in Multiple Occupation 2018. The designation is not required to be confirmed because it falls within a description of designations for which the Secretary of State has issued a General Approval dated 26 March 2015.

The designation shall come into force on the 1st of October 2018 and shall cease to have effect on the 30th of September 2023.

The designation may be inspected, during office hours by appointment, at the Private Sector Housing Team's offices at 2 Hillman Street (The Annex) London E8 1FB (contact details below).

Further information, advice and assistance regarding the designation and how to apply for a licence, is available from the Council's Private Sector Housing Team, contact details as follows:

- Telephone: 020 8356 4866
- Website: www.hackney.gov.uk
- Email: privatesectorhousing@hackney.gov.uk
- Mail: Private Sector Housing Team, 2 Hillman Street (The Annex), London, E8 1FB

Landlords, managing agents or tenants within the designated area are advised to seek advice on whether their property is affected by the designation by contacting the Council's Private Sector Housing Team.

Upon the designation coming into force on the 1st of October 2018 any person who operates a licensable property without a licence is liable to prosecution and upon summary conviction is liable to an unlimited fine or alternatively may be made subject to a financial penalty not exceeding £30,000. Such failure to licence may also lead to an application for a rent repayment order. Furthermore no section 21 notice may be given in relation to a shorthold tenancy of a part of an unlicensed HMO so long as it remains such an HMO.

London Borough of Hackney. Designation of an area for Selective Licensing Section 80, Housing Act 2004

The London Borough of Hackney ("The Council") in exercise of its powers under section 80 of the Housing Act 2004 ("the Act") has on the 10th of May 2018 designated an area of its district, as subject to Selective Licensing. This designation applies to the entire districts of each of the three wards of Brownswood, Cazenove and Stoke Newington in the London Borough of Hackney as delineated and edged red on the map at Annex A.

The designation applies to any house which is occupied under a tenancy or licence within the area unless a statutory exemption applies.

This designation will be known as the London Borough of Hackney Designation of an Area for Selective Licensing 2018.

The designation is not required to be confirmed because it falls within a description of designations for which the Secretary of State has issued a General Approval dated 26 March 2015.

The designation shall come into force on the 1st of October 2018 and shall cease to have effect on the 30th of September 2023.

The designation may be inspected, during office hours by appointment, at the Private Sector Housing Team's offices at 2 Hillman Street (The Annexe) London E8 1FB (contact details below).

Further information advice and assistance regarding the designation and how to apply for a licence, is available from the Council's Private Sector Housing Team, contact details as follows:

- Telephone: 020 8356 4866
- Website: www.hackney.gov.uk
- Email: privatesectorhousing@hackney.gov.uk
- Mail: Private Sector Housing Team, 2 Hillman Street (The Annexe), London, E8 1FB

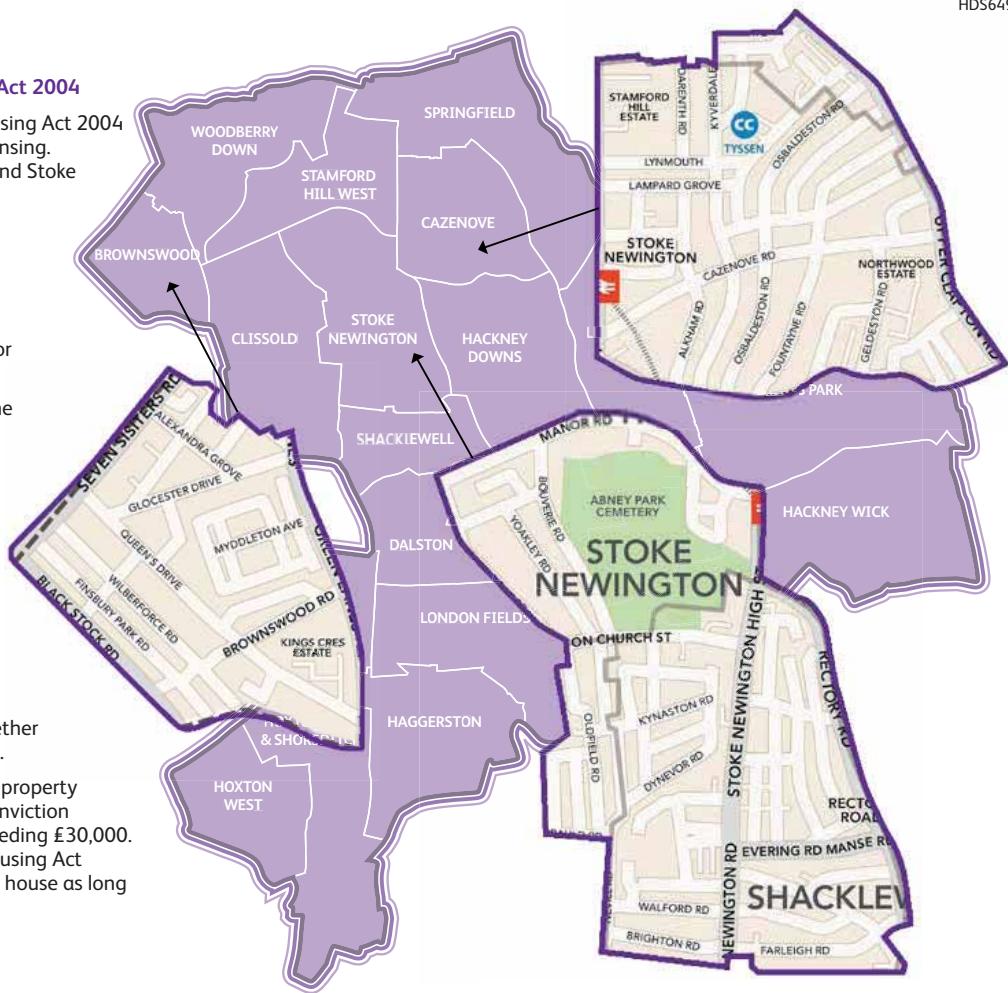

Landlords, managing agents or tenants within the designated area are advised to seek advice on whether their property is affected by the designation by contacting the Council's Private Sector Housing Team.

Upon the designation coming into force on the 1st of October 2018 any person who fails to licence a property that is required to be licensed commits an offence and either may be prosecuted and on summary conviction ordered to pay an unlimited fine or alternatively may be made subject to a financial penalty not exceeding £30,000. Such failure to licence may also lead to an application for a rent repayment order. Furthermore no Housing Act 1988 s21 notice may be given in respect of a shorthold tenancy of the whole or part of an unlicensed house as long as it remains unlicensed.
